STAFF REPORT ON FRAUDULENT NOMINATING PETITIONS

I. Introduction

During review of candidate nominating petitions submitted for the August 2, 2022 Primary Election, Bureau of Elections (Bureau) staff identified 36 petition circulators¹ who submitted fraudulent petition sheets consisting entirely of invalid signatures. All petition sheets submitted by these circulators displayed suspicious patterns indicative of fraud, and staff reviewing these signatures against the Qualified Voter File (QVF) did not identify any signatures that appeared to be submitted by a registered voter. Taken together, these circulators provided nominating petitions in at least 10 petition drives. During standard petition review, staff identified the same circulators in several sets of petitions for which at least 2,000 signatures were required to appear on the ballot, including candidates for governor, circuit judge, and district judge.

In total, the Bureau estimates that these circulators submitted at least 68,000 invalid signatures submitted across 10 sets of nominating petitions. In several instances, the number of invalid signatures submitted by these circulators was the reason a candidate had an insufficient number of valid signatures. In other instances, while invalid signatures were identified in the candidate's filing, the number was insufficient to move the number of signatures below the threshold for ballot qualification.

Although it is typical for staff to encounter some signatures of dubious authenticity scattered within nominating petitions, the Bureau is unaware of another election cycle in which this many circulators submitted such a substantial volume of fraudulent petition sheets consisting of invalid signatures, nor an instance in which it affected as many candidate petitions as at present.

Because of the pervasiveness of fraudulent petition sheets and the fact that sheets submitted by the same circulators affected multiple candidates, staff have prepared an omnibus report documenting the detection of, and staff response to, these petition sheets. The extent to which each candidate's ballot qualification is affected by these circulators is proportional to the number and percentage of these circulator sheets in the candidate's nominating petition submission. This report explains how and when staff identified the fraudulent petition sheets, the process developed to address the fraudulent sheets, and an appendix showing examples of the practices these circulators used to submit invalid signatures.

II. Timeline of Detection and Response

The Bureau of Elections accepts filings for candidates seeking election to certain offices in Michigan. Most candidates make their filings in the two weeks preceding the filing deadline. In 2022, the filing deadline was April 19.²

Given the large number of candidates seeking to qualify for the ballot, Bureau staff began to review nominating petitions at the end of March, after several gubernatorial candidates had submitted nominating petitions. During this review, staff noticed a large number of petition sheets, submitted by certain circulators, appeared fraudulent and consisted entirely of invalid signatures. These petition sheets tended to display at least one of the following patterns:

- An unusually large number of petition sheets where every signature line was completed, or where every line was completed but one or two lines were crossed out;³
- Many sheets showing signs of apparent attempts at “intentional” signature invalidity, including sheets where an entry listed a county in the “city or township” field, or a birth date rather than the date of signing in the “date” field;⁴
- An unusually large number of petition sheets that showed no evidence of normal wear that accompanies circulation, including folding, scuffing, minor water damage from rain, or any of the other characteristics that come from sheets being kept on clipboards and handled by multiple people in public or outdoor conditions.
- Sheets that appeared to be “round-tabled” a practice in which a group of individuals passes around sheets with each individual signing one line on each sheet with handwriting different from the circulator’s handwriting, in an attempt to make handwriting and signatures appear authentic and received from actual voters.
- Sheets on which blank and completed lines were randomly interspersed, indicating that a sheet had been submitted “mid-round-table.” In such cases, a sheet was submitted even though the round-tabling process had not been completed.
- Sheets where all ten lines had signatures and partial addresses or dates, but only a random subset were fully completed;
- Sheets on which every instance of the handwriting of certain letters across different signatory lines and sheets, including in the signatures themselves, was near-identical;⁵
- Sets of sheets where the two or three distinct handwriting styles appeared on multiple sheets.⁶

² “[N]ominating petitions shall be received by the secretary of state for filing in accordance with this act up to 4 p.m. of the fifteenth Tuesday before the August primary.” (MCL 168.53)

⁴ These errors are uncommon but sporadically observed on sheets submitted by typical circulators. In this case they appear to be an unsuccessful attempt to mimic the difficulties of collecting signatures from real individuals.

⁵ For example, capital “A” and “H” would be identical across all petition sheets for a given circulator.

⁶ For example, in one cluster each sheet would have a distinctive slanted signature, a distinctive looping signature, and a signature that was unusually small.

Based on these observations, staff began to compare signatures on the petitions to the QVF. During its review against the QVF, staff noticed the following:

- Discrepancies in the signature appearing on the petition sheet and the voter’s signature appearing in the Qualified Voter File;
- An unusually high number of signatures corresponding to addresses where the voter was previously but not currently registered to vote;⁷
- An unusually high number of signatures corresponding to formerly registered voters whose registrations were cancelled because the voter had died months or years prior to the date of the signature;⁸
- Several errors in the voters’ names where the name on the petition was spelled differently than the voters’ registration in the QVF or where the petition used the voter’s middle name or a diminutive or nickname;
- The jurisdictions listed almost always utilized the mailing address versus the actual jurisdiction.

After review, staff identified across multiple drives numerous circulators that had submitted fraudulent signatures and assembled a list of the names of circulators who had signed multiple petition sheets consisting of invalid signatures. These patterns suggest to staff that the fraudulent circulators were utilizing an outdated mailing list obtained from some source. As more nominating petitions were submitted, staff continued to identify fraudulent sheets and build the list of circulators consistently submitting such sheets.

After the April 19, 2022 filing deadline passed, staff scanned and provided copies of nominating petitions to anyone who had requested copies. As much as possible, staff provides copies of all requested petitions within 24 hours of receiving the request. Challenges to the sufficiency of nominating petitions were submitted to the Bureau of Elections by Tuesday, April 26.⁹ Some challenges included lists of circulators who challengers alleged had submitted fraudulent petition sheets. Many of the circulators on the lists included by challengers were the same circulators staff had identified during the initial review of petitions.¹⁰

III. Processing Petition Sheets

The Bureau’s standard approach to processing nominating petitions has two stages. First, staff “face reviews” every petition sheet and signature for facial compliance with the Michigan Election Law, which includes: checking that the signature header and the circulator certificate are properly completed; that each signature is accompanied by an address, name, and date; that

⁷ Many of these voters had moved years prior to the date they allegedly signed the petition sheet. A large number of out-of-date addresses is often the result of fraudulent-petition circulators finding names on outdated voter registration and mailing lists to add to petition sheets.

⁸ Similar to the outdated addresses, a high frequency of names of deceased individuals indicates that fraudulent-petition circulators found names to include on petition sheets on an outdated voter registration or mailing list.

⁹ As in every election cycle, in addition to challenges to petition signatures, a number of challenges were made to the sufficiency of a candidate’s Affidavit of Identity or Affidavit of Candidacy. These affidavit challenges are resolved by the Secretary of State in her role as the filing official for these candidates. Just as the Secretary of State does not determine the sufficiency of a candidate’s nominating petitions, the Board of State Canvassers does not determine the sufficiency of a candidate’s filed affidavit. For that reason, staff does not address challenges to affidavits in staff reports presented to the Board.

¹⁰ Some circulators who challengers claimed to have submitted fraudulent petitions were reviewed by staff and found to be legitimate circulators collecting real signatures. For example, one challenge cited Abram Minton, but staff determined that the signatures on Minton’s petitions sheets did not appear to be forged.

the city or township in which the signer claimed to reside was in the county written on the signature header; and other issues required for a facially valid sheet or signature. During past face reviews, the Bureau has identified scattered instances of signatures of dubious authenticity, and upon review of the signature removed these from the total of valid signatures

At the conclusion of stage one (face review), staff determines how many signatures have been disqualified for facial errors and the calculates the balance of remaining potential valid signatures remaining. If the candidate now has fewer signatures than the total required to qualify, the Bureau will recommend that the Board determine the petitions insufficient. If the candidate has more signatures remaining than the required number to qualify, the Bureau notes the difference (the “cushion”).

In the second stage, Bureau staff then reviews any challenges to the petition’s sufficiency. If the number of challenged signatures is larger than the cushion, staff processes the challenge and determines how many of the challenged signatures were invalid. If the number of challenged signatures is not larger than the cushion, staff does not process the challenge because the cushion could not be overcome by the challenge (even if all challenged signatures were invalid, the candidate would still have enough signatures to qualify).

After reviewing the challenge, if the number of potentially valid signatures remaining on the candidate’s nominating petitions falls below the threshold required to be placed on the ballot, staff recommends that the Board of State Canvassers determine the candidate’s petitions to be insufficient. If, at the time processing was complete, the number of potentially valid signatures remaining on the candidate’s nominating petitions is above the threshold required to be placed on the ballot, staff recommends that the Board of State Canvassers certify the candidate’s name to the ballot.

Because, in the past, the number of signatures of dubious authenticity were typically scattered throughout petitions and relatively small in number, the Bureau has previously not developed a separate review procedure for fraudulent petition sheets. Instead, the Bureau would review sheets and signatures individually if identified during face review or during a challenge. However, because of the unprecedented number of fraudulent petition sheets consistent of invalid signatures identified during the initial review of petition sheets submitted this election cycle, and the fact that the same fraudulent-petition circulators submitted petition sheets for many different candidates, it was not practical to review these sheets individually during the course of ordinary face review and challenge processing.

Instead, staff utilized an additional step within the processing method described above. Prior to face review, staff reviewed each candidate’s petitions for petitions signed by circulators who were suspected of submitting fraudulent sheets.¹¹ Signatures appearing on these fraudulent sheets were separated from the remaining petition sheets for each candidate. To verify that these fraudulent petition sheets did not include sheets or individual signatures that were actually valid signatures submitted by registered voters, staff conducted a targeted signature check of signatures across each circulator's sheets for each candidate to confirm that these circulators' submissions in fact consisted of fraudulent sheets with invalid signatures.¹²

The Bureau determined that all reviewed signatures appearing on sheets signed by the fraudulent-petition circulators were invalid. After petition sheets submitted by the fraudulent-petition circulators were identified, the number of signatures appearing on those sheets was totaled and that total was subtracted from the number of signatures submitted by the candidate. If the candidate had enough potentially valid signatures to remaining to avoid immediate disqualification, the petitions were then put through the face review and challenge process described above. If not, Bureau recommended the Board determine the petitions insufficient.

Staff determined that the fraudulent petition sheets consisted of signatures that were invalid because the petitions consisted of names of voters who were not registered in the appropriate jurisdiction, or names of valid registered voters with forged signatures. Staff were able to identify fraudulent petition sheets using a combination of methods. First, staff noted that the signatures, names, addresses, and dates on many of the fraudulent sheets were obviously signed by one or a small number of individuals which can be seen in the Upon noticing these similarities in handwriting, staff began to check individual signatures and voter information against the Qualified Voter File.

Review showed that a significant percentage of alleged signatories were no longer registered in the jurisdiction because they had moved from the address marked on the petition sheet months or years before. Review also revealed that a number of the alleged signatories' registrations were cancelled because the individual had died prior to the date of signing. None of the reviewed signatures appearing on these petition sheets had redeeming qualities demonstrating a match when compared with the signature on file.

IV. Remedial Action

The Bureau's review of sheets submitted by fraudulent-petition circulators has resulted in determinations that many candidates have insufficient petitions for this election. Candidate-level determinations are described on the staff report for each candidate. Staff are also working with the Michigan Department of State's Office of Investigative Services to refer incidents of apparent fraud to law enforcement for criminal investigation.

At this point, the Bureau does not have reason to believe that any specific candidates or campaigns were aware of the activities of fraudulent-petition circulators. The Bureau notes the preponderance of media reports about the difficulty in securing circulators and signatures this year, given the abundance of petition campaigns nationwide and the continuing lack of in-person events.¹³ Reportedly, the average cost of signature gathering rose from $5 to $7 per signature to $20 per signature. A news article from late 2021 indicates that head of the firm was recruiting circulators in Florida.¹⁴ He previously pled guilty to two counts of election fraud in 2011,¹⁵ in which he reportedly instructed two individuals to sign as a witness on dozens of petition sheets filled with signatures they did not collect.¹⁶

The Bureau does recommend that candidates and campaigns implement a quality control process before filing petitions, and to cross out any invalid signatures proper to submission.¹⁷ Regardless of the level of review candidates conducted before submitting nominating petitions, the Bureau's recommendation to the Board is based on the number of valid signatures remaining after review.

1. Identical sheets collected for multiple drives

During the canvass, the Bureau was notified via email by a citizen who indicated that two judicial candidates running for the same office engaged the same group of fraudulent circulators staff identified. The email alleged that the pages circulated are nearly identical which caused Shelton to not submit the signatures. When comparing the pages between the two candidates below, they are virtually identical with the only differences between the two being the name of the information in the heading:

 (County of Registration, if Registered to Vote, of a Circulator who is not a Resident of Michigan)

2. Signatures from voters who have been canceled or have not lived at the address on the petition for years.

Through its review, staff identified a number of fraudulent signatures that were purported to be from voters who had been canceled. Voters were canceled for a variety of reasons which included moving out of state and death. Several signatures also listed an address where the voter has not resided from at least one to eight years prior to signing.

3. Signatures where the voter's name was misspelled or utilized an uncommon abbreviation

In some cases, the voter's name is misspelled, either in the signature block or in the block for the voter's printed name. The purported name of a registered voter being misspelled is an indicator of fraud. Although signatures do not need to be legible to be accepted, a large number of petition sheets across multiple drives contained errors in which the proffered signature appears to have a different spelling than the printed name - an indicator of fraud.

Johnson petition sheet 736, line 8: voter's name is Lia and the signature indicates "Lian" or "Liar."

An additional anomaly is the use of a first name and last initial as a signature. Using a first initial and last name (for example, J. Smith) is not uncommon; the inverse (John S.) is rare. Nonetheless, this unusual combination was included throughout the fraudulent petition sheets, including the below examples:

Brown petition sheet 31, line 3:

4. Misspellings in other fields or mischaracterizations of jurisdictions

In some cases, the name of the voter's jurisdiction or street was spelled wrong, or the jurisdiction was mischaracterized. For example, Bloomfield Hills was often written as Bloomfield.

Johnson petition sheet 735, line 8: voter lives on Crossbridge Dr. in Holly and the petition sheet indicates "Crossshires Dr." in "Holy."

8.	Joseph H. Hays	Joseph Hays	6395 Cassin Ave	Clarkston	48021	09	22
----	-----------------------	-------------	-----------------	-----------	-------	----	----

Johnson petition sheet 731, lines 4 and 7: the city of Clarkston is spelled “Clarksten.” Additionally, both appear to be written by the same hand.

Clarksten	Clarksten

Johnson petition sheet 4064, line 8: voter lives on Callender St, not “Calender St.”

8.	Joseph Attard	Joseph Attard	1601 Calender St	Southfield	48074	16	22

8.	Betty Boud	Betty Boud	2080 Telegraph	Bloomfield	48302	09	22

In addition to the examples above, throughout the Malone submission, fraudulent-petition circulator Stephen Tinnin listed their jurisdiction as Brownstone Township instead of Brownstown Township, as in Malone petition sheets 518, 160, and 342, below.

Name of City or Township	Name of City or Township	Name of City or Township

5. Distinctive flourishes repeated throughout several signatures

Characteristics of certain fraudulent-petition circulators included a distinctive writing slant, use of certain letters or, in this case the lower-case “f” in Flint and circle instead of a dot over the lower-case “i.”

Markey petition sheet 2268, line 6:

6.	Simone Adams	Simone Adams	321 E Philadelphia Blvd	Flint	48505	2	15	22

5. Patricia Drowe	Patricia Drowe	1728 Henry St	Mehendable	48122	04	11	22

The 1st and 2nd signatures on Brown petition sheet 1187 and the 4th and 5th signatures on Brown petition sheet 1356 display the same distinctive flourish across the entire signature. The flourish does not appear in any of the four signatures in QVF.

1. M. Keith Stotts	M. Keith Stotts	31787 Florence St	Garden City	48135	1	20	22
2. Ralph D Magee	Ralph D Magee	7119 Rosedale Blvd	Allen Park	48101	1	20	22

5. Pamela Hutchinson	Pamela Hutchinson	13108 Tinkbet Rd	Riley	48041	1	19	22

The "M" in the 2nd and 10th signatures on Malone petition sheet 714 is also distinctive.

2. M. Sullivan	M. Sullivan
10. M. Sullivan	M. Sullivan

In some cases, rather than attempting varying signatures, the circulator would intentionally scrawl illegibly for some or all signatures, as on Craig petition sheet 248, below. Staff compared all of the following signatures against those in the QVF and none had any redeeming qualities. Additionally, the first signer lives in Farmington Hills, not Farmington.

10. Abra Franklin	Abra Franklin	27044 Arrow St	Novi	48333	3	21	22

Craig petition sheet 2548, below, likewise shows consistent use of an intentionally illegible scrawl. None remotely resembled the signer's QVF signature.

6. Petition sheets all in the same hand

Some pages are more obvious than others. For instance, at times fraudulent-petition circulators made little effort to vary handwriting.

7. Roundtabled sheets

In other instances, they circulated petition sheets among themselves, each filling out a line. The petition sheets below are examples sheet that were submitted “mid-round-table.” While most of the values are completed, the people who were charged with forging the signatures on lines 3, 5, and 9 of Craig petition sheet 2521 left those spaces blank. There are distinctive patterns between the completed lines as well.

8. Examples from other circulators

Staff's tally for fraudulent-petition circulators and fraudulent signatures likely understates the total volume. Additional examples of sheets clearly completed by a single hand, or which were round-tabled, are below. In the second and third example, alternating lines were filled out by different colored pens to convey randomness. However, similar handwriting is clear across sheets and especially when the lines completed in a certain color are considered together.

Cox (unnumbered because fraudulent-petition circulators were not enough to place candidate below minimum signature threshold)
